REPORT OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Town of Pelham, N. H., for the Year ending March 1, 1901.

The citizens of a town are bound together by common interests. Of these interests the schools are the most important.

The children of a town, the schools, the school buildings and their furnishings, are the truest exponent of the real wealth of any community.

At the present time the children of the town, considered as a whole, are much above the average in ability and attainment.

They are teachable and easily controlled. This counts to the credit of the pupils and their teachers, and it counts to the credit of all the families who have children in the schools.

INTEREST IN THE SCHOOLS.

"Do you visit the schools?" is a question often asked, and it is asked in such a manner as to imply that visiting or not visiting the schools is to be taken as the decisive test of interest. But visiting a school is a small matter compared with the many other things that should be done. A teacher is put into a school and paid to do a specific work for a certain number of pupils, it is her duty to do that work in the best possible manner; it is ours to see that the pupils are there regularly, that they are there in season, and that they are in as good a condition, bodily and mentally, as care and forethought can make possible.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

To the Inhabitants of the School District of the Town of Pelham, gualified to vote in District Affairs:

School Board.

We must not forget that excitement or late hours lessens the vigor and impairs the working of a child's brain, and as a consequence the amount of work that can be done in the school room is lessened and its quality deteriorated.

As overwork dwarfs and deforms the body of the growing child, so undue excitement or insufficient sleep dwarfs and deforms the brain.

TEACHERS.

We need trained teachers — those who have learned the art of teaching. Education is a very small part of the equipment needed; it is only the kit of tools; a term of apprenticeship must be served in order to know how to use them.

The superintendent of a hospital once said to me, "With one exception, we employ only trained nurses. This one has been with us for years, and having fine natural ability, she has acquired a skill that makes her too valuable to lose."

This is often paralleled among teachers. Our three best workers, whose schools are well-nigh models, are self trained. They have acquired the art of teaching by years of practice. We could not afford to exchange them for graduates of normal or training school.

Yet, in these days of privilege, neither the schools nor those who teach, can afford to wait for the slow process of experience.

The science and the art of teaching should be learned under competent instructors, in schools provided for this purpose. With teachers so trained and with experience added, we might hope for satisfactory schools.

BOOKS,

At the last meeting, the town voted to raise one hundred dollars for school supplies. The Board were unanimous in the resolve not to expend more than the sum voted. They determined to do without rather than spend more, applying the same rule as to one's private finances. "What we can't pay for we wont have" But long before the year closed the money had all been expended. The schools were in session, books and stationery were needed; it would be as bad policy to withhold the needed material as to send hired men into a field to work and give them no tools. As a result of these conditions some fifty dollars more than voted has been expended.

The present system has its advantages and it also has its disadvantages. It is discouraging to a child to have to take an old book, worn and soiled. Yet books have to pass from one child to another as garments do in a family of growing children, and the books can't be made over and brightened up as the garment can.

A talk upon the care of books and regard for property not our own does not go very deep or have great influence unless the books about which we are talking are in good condition. If some leaves are out of the binding and some torn and soiled the children naturally reason that a little increase of this unattractive and inconvenient condition won't matter much.

Carelessness with old books that are not one's own leads to carelessness with those that are new.

For myself, I cannot help wishing that as in the old time, each child owned his own book. To own a book is such a luxury to a child it is a pity that it should be missed out of school life.

REPAIRS.

With the exception of paint, the school houses are now in very good condition. Two will have to be painted soon.

NINTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

PELHAM FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

TRUSTEES' REPORT.

In their annual report the trustees have nothing of special importance to say regarding the condition of the Free Public Library except that it is prosperous, is as well patronized as usual, and has every assurance of a happy future. We are sure the people of Pelham fully realize its advantages and will give it their fostering care and support.

We have added as many new books during the year as the money at our command made it seem expedient to buy and regret that we are not so situated as to increase the number of volumes more rapidly, however we have maintained a steady growth which is entirely satisfactory, and have now a library which, we think, will compare favorably with the libraries of other towns of the same size and means.

The free public library in rural districts, where the people are necessarily more limited in their opportunities for literary study than they are in cities, is a blessing which we should value highly and an education of no inconsiderable importance.

In the selection of books the trustees have endeavored to exercise a spirit of guarded liberty and careful tolerance and have purchased and accepted books barring only bad ones; for as we understand it a liberal education implies liberty and tolerance in the study of subjects and in order to reach a just conclusion or an accurate knowledge of any subject one must have a comprehensive understanding of it, neither looking at it through colored glasses, as it were, nor from only one point of view. The only truly educated man is the one who educates himself and accepts as fact only what his reason teaches him is true. The only true knowledge is the conclusions reached by our own deductions. I do not mean by this assertion to disparage the knowledge of wiser men, but what I mean is this; that what we do not understand we do not know.

Hence the first and most important function of the public library is the incentive to original thought through our reading the thoughts of different authors of many different beliefs. They spread out on the printed page before us their thoughts, their theories, and beliefs, and many ideas new to us which we either accept or reject and by a process of reasoning of our own deduce others which we believe are true; in either case the conclusions which we finally reach become our own. Therefore one of the most important benefits of reading is — it makes us think.

For the benefit of those who have moved into town since our last annual report was published we wish to say, that any lists of books, which they wish purchased, or think advisable to purchase, handed in to the librarian or trustees will be considered a favor and will meet with due consideration, for we desire to get a variety of books interesting to all and adapted to all classes of literary taste.

We hereby acknowledge all gifts of books which have been presented to the library during the year and take this occasion to assure the donors of our appreciation of such gifts.

A supplementary list of books added to the library since April 1, 1898, will be published in this years' town report.

Thanking the librarian for her able and competent, services, and wishing the library another prosperous year, we respectfully submit this report.

SHERMAN HOBBS, GEO. S. BUTLER, FRANK M. WOODBURY.
